May 6 Declared Founder's Day

Plans are not yet complete, but the Selectmen have made it definite that May 6 will be observed in Andover as Founder's Day.

In a proclamation dated Monday, the board said it is "both fitting and appropriate" that the citizens annually commemorate Andover's incorporation on May 6, 1646.

The board makes no specific suggestions, but calls upon the citizenry to "observe and participate in the observation of this day in an appropriate manner."

For the town's part, it will recognize municipal employees on this date and begin this year with the presentation of service pins to long-term employees. Also mentioned: the possibility of a half-holiday, and a banquet or tea and reception in their honor.

• With just a touch of bitterness, Town Manager Richard Bowen said at the Board of Selectmen's meeting Monday that the board is proceeding with land acquisition for elementary school sites, "but plans are of such a nature that they will not be publicized." The Board has been under pressure from the School Committee, though no new elementary school construction has yet been scheduled.

• More than three tons of Girl Scout cookies will arrive in Andover Friday for weekend distribution. Seventeen troops sold 12,156 boxes in the 1965 sale, up six percent over last year. Mrs. Fred E. Roediger was neighborhood cookie chairman.

• The names of Robert M. Nichols, 69 Gould Rd., and Winston Blake, 5 Stratford Rd., were drawn for jury duty at Monday's Selectmen's meeting.

• Action on an application from the power company to install a support pole near the Sunset Rock rd. residence of Atty. Fredric O'Brien has been held for two weeks during which time the com-

School Board Drafting Giant Plan For Action

The School Committee is busy whipping up a giant, year-long agenda for itself . . . a plan of action.

When it meets March 23, the committee will be confronted with a list of some 50 possible subjects of consideration which fall into more than thirteen broad categories.

The list, compiled by Committeewoman Virginia H. Cole, represents the thinking of the total committee and will be used to formulate a priority-ordered agenda.

If majority interest is the criteria, the number one consideration will apparently be the introduction of a second foreign language into the curriculum, an item listed by all five committeemen.

Four have indicated a desire to give additional study to salaries, an evaluation of the Harrington-Willis Commission report and a review of the curriculum.

Three want to take a long look at the guidance department and program, a projection of future school needs, programs for retarded children and for teacher recruitment.

Two see a need to update the committee's rules and regulations to make whatever moves are necessary to improve inter-departmental and school-community communications and for an immediate study of school housing problems.

It may be, however, that some of the liveliest discussion will come from consideration of items suggested by a single member: the touchy subject of tenure and tenure procedures, for example (Cole)

And sure to be of interest is the suggestion that an attitude survey be taken to "measure" the image the Andover School system projects to parents and taxpayers, the idea (Chairman Bob Sherman's) being to gain some insight into strengths and shortcomings.

Bill Doherty would like to see School libraries evaluated, English given more attention in the curriculum and an increased emphasis on dramatics, public speaking and debating.

TAKE HEART

Motorists who expect to grow old waiting for the light at the corner of Chestnut and Main to hit green, take heart.

Selectman William Stewart's mention Monday that he had had a complaint about the time interval on the cross-street light unleashed a series of side comments both from the board and onlookers.

The matter has been referred to the Police Department for immediate solution.

Fire Fighters Earn Accolades

Richard H. Moody pinned a verbal rose on Andover firemen this week in a letter commending Chief Henry L. Hilton for the department's performance at a Ballardvale factory fire.

"The conduct of the Andover Fire Department last Friday (March 12) night at our plant was superb," Moody said.

"They were prompt, well controlled and obviously informed on our particular problems concerning water," the letter continued. "The courtesy and consideration shown for our property resulted in the most effective fire fighting with the least resultant damage."

Moody, whose firm is in the textile fiber processing business, concluded his letter as follows: "As part of Andover's industry, we would like to compliment you, Chief, on what must be a very fine training program."

Co-Op Reports Biggest Net In 25 Years

Andover Consumers Cooperative Inc. elected three officers, three directors and three alternate directors at its annual stockholders' meeting held Tuesday in the Phillips Academy gymnasium.

Reporting the most profitable year in its 25-year history, the Co-op told stockholders it would return an estimated $59,214 to patrons in a 4.3 percent refund. The corporation had 1964 sales of $1,635,848 and net savings (comparable to net profit) of $92,803 before taxes.

Named to executive posts in the annual election were Douglas Pitman, treasurer, Henry Dolan, assistant treasurer and Catherine Myers, clerk, all candidates for re-election.

Elected to the board were Dino Valz, Charles Dufton and Barbara (Mrs. Harold A.) Johnson. Both Valz and Dufton were on the board last year.

The some 300 shareholders attending the annual banquet and business meeting also elected three alternate directors: Norman Barraclough, George Noury and Charles Leigh.

Church Members Protest "Selma"

Some 200 members of South Congregational Church signed a petition Sunday urging President Lyndon B. Johnson to take "immediate steps to guarantee the Constitutional rights and privileges of all American citizens."

The petition said that members of Andover's South Parish were requesting "prompt and positive action" to end "such outrages as have been occurring in Selma, Ala."

The church's Social Action Committee, headed by Louis Anderson, made a similar protest in a wire sent directly to the White House March 10.

Copies of the petition were sent to the U. S. attorney general, both Massachusetts' U. S. senators, Congressman Bradford Morse, the Rev. Martin Luther King and Gov. George Wallace of Alabama.

THE TRUTH ABOUT MOVING ESTIMATES

The truth about moving estimates is that they are often not worth the paper they're written on. Most people believe that the best way to pick a mover is to get three estimates and give the job to the lowest bidder. But this simply is not true. Here's why: All interstate and most intrastate moving rates are regulated. In other words, if three moving companies could move you at the same time, all three bills would be virtually identical—no matter who gave you the lowest estimate. So don't pick your mover by the estimate he gives you. Pick him by reputation and by service. Naturally, you still need to know approximately what the move will cost. Not only will we tell you what this will be, we will also show you exactly how it's figured.

We have to, for two basic reasons: (1) If we surprise a customer with a bill much larger than he expected, he certainly won't like it. (2) If we figure less space than needed on a van (which makes for lower cost estimates), we run the risk of loading delays and more unhappy customers. We can't afford to lose customers either way. That's the truth. So wherever you are moving (anywhere in the free world) call us.

And

Professor Pokes Holes In Commission Report

A Tufts University education professor and prominent international authority on youth is contesting the Harrington-Willis Commission's resolution merely to patch up, instead of completely remodel, Massachusetts' public education system.

In an advance paper prepared for discussion at Tufts Assembly on Massachusetts Government which is to be held later this month, Dr. William C. Kvaraceus says, "The State Commission has decided to overhaul the public school system . . . while the Commonwealth may get a few more miles out of the old buggy . . . the decision to hold on to the old model will in the long run prove an unwise and expensive move."

Dr. Kvaraceus' concepts for a "new model" include the utilization of "out-of-school education as an essential complement to the in-school program."

He contends that the recommendations of the Commission's survey staff "invariably treat the schools as a self-contained and self-determining institution and tend to slight the mutual impact of school on society and society on school. In a sense, the school is pictured as taking over the total task of preparation for life, at a time when . . . home and school alone cannot adequately train and educate youth for their full-life role."

The Tufts professor regards the Commission's recommendation for extension of the compulsory school age (six to 18) as an indicator of the times. "Social planners tend to push compulsory age limits upward in times of economic stress," he explained. "Idle youth 'represent a threat to the adult community.'"

"Adding two more years of compulsory education for those who are not now graduating can hasten the inner decay of the public school system. Captive students seldom make capital scholars."

"The Tufts Assembly should face the question: 'Are other agencies and institutions in the Commonwealth - business and industry, the military, child welfare and . . . youth-serving agencies - in a more strategic position through out-of-school education to meet the education and training needs of this segment of the youth population than are the public schools?' he advises.

"The authors of the summary report have deftly sought to steer between judging present school practices as 'good' or 'bad' and the hard task of prescription and specification of desirable educational patterns," continues Dr. Kvaraceus.

The report, he says, "deals mainly in the most general pedagogic platitudes that carry the familiar and stale smell of combined education courses - the stock in trade of the college departments of education and of the Teachers' Colleges so recently renamed in the Commonwealth."

Dr. Kvaraceus expresses concern at educational centralization as demonstrated by the Commission's call for three separate governing bodies: a Board of Public School Education, a Board of Higher Education, and a coordinating Advisory Council on Education. Instead he hopes that schools may be allowed local initiative to follow in paths taken by two of "the most promising school systems in this country," Newton, Mass. and Melbourne, Fla., where he says experimentation and innovation are the hallmarks.

"There is always the danger that school programs may regress to the average or model program if the accent is placed on 'state-wide curriculum standardization.' What the summary report lacks is a stronger emphasis . . . on the establishment of optimal standards as distinct from minimal requirements."

"There is little evidence in this summary report that past trends have been plotted, that other alternatives have been considered. . . . It is short on roots and is overly concerned with current situations rather than with bedrock educational concepts and ideas," observes Dr. Kvaraceus.

"There is little in these recommendations that will change the schools in any radical way."

Dr. Kvaraceus concludes, "In spite of its shortcomings, the summary report is justified in its strong plea for more adequate support for improving and extending public education at all levels. But as this summary report now stands, lacking visible historical, philosophical and empirical bases, the citizens of the state - lay and professional - have been handed a bare and shopworn set of blueprints."

The 1965 Tufts Assembly, based on the theme, "Public Education in Massachusetts: Its Problems and Challenges," is conducted by the staff of the Lincoln Filene Center for Citizenship and Public Affairs of Tufts University.

New England Weather Bugs Scientists Too!

New England weather will come under intensive scrutiny this month when Project Stormy Spring gets underway Monday. Stormy Spring is the nickname for a concentrated series of observations of New England weather patterns which will run until April 30.

As presently planned, it will be one of the most massive and intensive programs for observing weather dynamics over a limited region that has yet been undertaken.

Under this project, more than 20 meteorologists of the Air Force Cambridge Research Laboratories, Bedford, will look at all phases of spring storms . . . horizontal and vertical winds, temperatures, pressures, humidity, precipitation, ozone - from date-gathering sites all over southern New England.

A massive array of highly advanced equipment and techniques will be used, U-2 and C-130 weather aircraft, weather radars, weather satellites, as well as standard meteorological data gatherers, will have major roles in the project. From the data collected, AFCRL scientists hope to gain a better understanding of the anatomy of storms.

The ultimate goal of Stormy Spring is to improve the precision of weather forecasting at the local level. While much research has been devoted to large-scale national weather patterns, weather structures within areas of 20 to 200 miles have received far less attention. Weather behavior within this restricted area is sometimes highly unpredictable. For example, a major rain storm predicted for the Boston area may occur 50 miles away, with only a minor shower hitting the city. During the six-week period of Stormy Spring, it is expected that at least two or three major storm systems will pass through southern New England. These storms usually last about 24 to 30 hours. AFCRL scientists will focus attention on these storms. Simultaneous observations of all processes that affect the movement, growth, dissipation and path of these storms will be made from aircraft and from numerous ground sites.

Some specific goals of Stormy Spring are:

1) To study the circulation and dynamics of cloud and precipitation bands, high-and-low-level frontal zones, and pressure systems.

2) To determine the distribution of moisture and precipitation, the mechanism of moisture balance, and the physics of precipitation growth in various portions of the cyclones.

3) To evaluate the stratosphere-troposphere exchange processes by examining the ozone structure of the upper troposphere and lower stratosphere in relation to the associated circulations and thermal structures.

4) To develop and evaluate techniques of observation, data reduction, and analysis for future studies of this type.

● Just What is the Andover Consumers Cooperative?

The Andover CO-OP is a corporation made up by numerous local consumers each of whom has invested a small amount in this private business enterprise, established to serve basic consumer needs.

It serves these needs by providing quality merchandise at highly competitive prices in an attractive and convenient facility having a friendly atmosphere and ample parking space of its own.

It fosters free enterprise by encouraging local consumers to participate in business ownership and control.

It rewards these owners with a 5% annual dividend on shares of stock held.

It promotes democracy by practicing it where few businesses do - at its business meetings.

It esteems its shareholders as individuals by giving to each an equal right in the broad management of the enterprise.

It rewards its consumers with CASH refunds proportionate to their consumption. This has proven to be exceptionally rewarding.

It has its roots among local consumers and spreads its benefits among local citizens.

It is a successful example of local do-it-yourself capitalism functioning through local officers and directors, democratically chosen in the best American tradition.

Its wide acceptance by local consumers is clearly proven by the loyalty which an ever-increasing number of local citizens give to the cooperative way of doing business.

It has become an integral part of the basic life of the community which it serves.

Do You Belong in this Picture?

Your friends and neighbors - in and near Andover - who have created this local enterprise to serve the Consumers' interest invite you to discover for yourself that it pays to Shop CO-OP, where the more you buy, the more you save.

usually last about 24 to 30 hours. AFCL scientists will focus attention on these storms. Simultaneous observations of all processes that affect the movement, growth, dissipation and path of these storms will be made from air-craft and from numerous ground sites.

Some specific goals of Stormy Spring are:

1) To study the circulation and dynamics of cloud and precipitation bands, high-and-low-level frontal zones, and pressure systems.

2) To determine the distribution of moisture and precipitation, the mechanism of moisture balance, and the physics of precipitation growth in various portions of the cyclones.

3) To evaluate the stratosphere-troposphere exchange processes by examining the ozone structure of the upper troposphere and lower stratosphere in relation to the associated circulations and thermal structures.

4) To develop and evaluate techniques of observation, data reduction, and analysis for future studies of this type.

Walsh Issues Poison Rules

"Nowhere is the old adage, 'An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure' more applicable than in the control of accidental poisoning."

Robert A. Walsh, chairman of the Andover Board of Health, leads off a statement calling attention to National Poison Prevention Week with these words.

The local health official reports that more than fifty percent of all childhood accidents are related to poisoning. To back his contention, Walsh cites a survey done by the American Academy of Pediatrics for which its members were polled to determine the type of accidents most frequently encountered in private practice.

A U.S. Public Health Service report shows similarly that 500,000 children under the age of five are annually involved in accidental poisonings, Walsh said. The products most often involved are internal medicines, cleaning and polishing agents, pesticides and petroleum distillate products.

To avoid accidental poisonings in your home, advises Walsh, be sure to keep all household cleaning and polishing products, pesticides and medicines out of the reach or sight of children. Keep these materials in their original containers properly labeled. Never refer to medicine as candy and never take or administer medicine in the dark. Clean out your medicine cabinet periodically, getting rid of old medicines by flushing them down the drain, rinsing the container with water and then discarding it. Never throw the unwanted or outdated medicine or pesticide in your rubbish barrel or in the dump.

their children's school problems and keep the committee aware of problem areas and the attention given them.

Barbara Moody would like a staff recruitment policy formulated, the roles of the superintendent, School Committee and teachers in the development of salary compensation plans pinpointed and job descriptions drawn for administrators not covered by existing descriptions.

And among suggestions from Supt. Edward I. Erickson is a restatement of his interest in a longer school day and school year as well as a study of marks, marking systems and reports to parents, homework policies, programs for the gifted and ground rules for student teachers.

Other ideas from Virginia Cole include one for an annual review of the educational picture with staff people and department heads coming in for a free wheeling discussion of accomplishments, hopes and goals.

From Bob Sherman, the additional suggestion that a specific plan for measuring the effectiveness of the Andover School System be evolved.

If things move as planned, the committee will act at its next meeting to adopt the long-range agenda and begin ticking off the items listed.

LOCAL MARKET HAS GOOD YEAR

meeting was provided by Philip K. Allen who did pre-St. Patrick's Day readings from the famed "Mr. Dooley."

Town Manager Richard Bowen and Mrs. Bowen were special guests.

In the company's written report to 3,000 stockholders, Cornelia H. Fitts, 1964 president, called attention to General Manager Mary Angus' 20th anniversary with the market.

Miss Angus herself recalled the changes that have taken place in the intervening years. When she joined the Co-op in 1944 it had 250 members and annual sales of $66,507. The store was then in a rented portion of the building it now owns and almost fully occupies on the first floor.

Doctors Attack Four Diseases

The Essex North District Medical Society is launching a campaign to make people aware of the great need for protection against four ancient afflictions of mankind: the infectious diseases tetanus (lockjaw), diphtheria, whooping cough, and polio.

"The Society has become concerned," said Dr. George V. West, president, "because immunization against these diseases has fallen to low levels in many population groups in this area as well as in the U. S. as a whole."

Even though extremely effective and reliable vaccines have been available for many years, too many people have neglected to obtain this protection for themselves and their children because they have developed a false sense of security. They feel says Dr. West, that tetanus, diphtheria, or whooping cough will not strike them or their families.

"But this is all the more reason," warns the doctor "to be immunized." Years ago, when there were many cases of diphtheria and whooping cough, a segment of the population received natural protection against these diseases by coming into frequent contact with the germs without contracting the disease. With fewer cases there is much less likelihood for such natural protection and artificial means to protect the population must be used instead, he explains.

The man who looks too far into the future is apt to miss some good things of the present.

Doctors Attack
Four Diseases
The Essex North District Medical Society is launching a campaign to make people aware of the great need for protection against four ancient afflictions of mankind: the infectious diseases tetanus (lockjaw), diphtheria, whooping cough, and polio.

Even though extremely effective and reliable vaccines have been available for many years, too many people have neglected to obtain this protection for themselves and their children because they have developed a false sense of security. They feel says Dr. West, that tetanus, diphtheria, or whooping cough will not strike them or their families.

"But this is all the more reason," warns the doctor "to be immunized." Years ago, when there were many cases of diphtheria and whooping cough, a segment of the population received natural protection against these diseases by coming into frequent contact with the germs without contracting the disease. With fewer cases there is much less likelihood for such natural protection and artificial means to protect the population must be used instead, he explains.

The man who looks too far into the future is apt to miss some good things of the present.

Police Court item: Another lank specimen of humanity, whose personal appearance had not been improved by his sojourn in the cell below, secured the ear of the court and said he was a farm hand in Andover. He wanted the fine made as light as possible to enable him to pay up, and get back to his native heath. The (Lawrence) court generously knocked off two dollars from the fine, and thereby gained "thank you, Judge" from the punner whose name is William H. Miller.

The street lighting committee organized last Friday by the choice of M. A. Clement, chairman, and Felix G. Haynes, secretary. The last committee upon application, let some persons have the old kerosene on condition that they should light them, but it is found that in several cases they were lighted for a short time only. Now the committee requests that those who took the lights shall light them or they shall consider it within their bounds to take the same and give them to other applicants of which there are many.

Where Is Selma?

In little more than a week's time the name "Selma" has come to stand for the extremes of man's inhumanity to man.

It has given all who profess to believe in the guarantees of the Constitution a focal point for their protestations; and it has lent dramatic emphasis to the deep shame many Americans feel for the futility of our efforts to substitute national legislation for personal conviction.

It is easier to demand legal "equality" for the disenfranchised citizens of Selma, than it is to make a moral stand for it and its ramifications in Andover, Massachusetts. Nothing could expose this fact more clearly than the following letter written to this newspaper by a 10-year old boy:

"Dear Editor,

When I was passing out the Good Neighbor pledges I thought a lot of people would sign them. After Sunday school I went up to collect them and only a few had been signed. I was very disappointed at that. I think it is wrong not to let Negroes or anyone in our Neighborhood. I think they are just as good as we are and some even better.

I hope that other people will understand.

Your friend
Jon Fuller"

What was the pledge that Jonathan's fellow churchmen found so difficult to sign? What did it ask that stuck in their craw?

"I believe in the democratic principle of equal opportunities for all people, including the basic right freely to choose a place to live.

"I shall welcome people into my neighborhood without discrimination because of race, religion or national origin.

"I believe a community should make no distinction on these bases.

"I shall endeavor to make my personal practices match my beliefs."

Granted, this pledge asks that the white man agree to more for the Negro than his legal right to vote. It strikes at the core of what truly separates the races.

The fact that Jon found so few people willing to make such a bold commitment seems to indicate that though the majority may react with revulsion to physical violence, it is not yet ready to practice what it preaches.

A School Necessity

In the hammering out of its budget prior to Town Meeting, the School Committee debated a bit over the $2,000 increase in the budget for school libraries. The appropriation was finally set at $12,000, the sum requested.

Since Andover still trails recommended standards in its spending for school library books, it is difficult to understand why the increase should have met with resistance.

The American Library Association figures that it takes an annual expenditure of $4 to $6 per pupil to keep school libraries properly stocked. Last year Andover spent $2.28. This figure is exactly the national average.

The U. S. Office of Education has done a series of statistical studies from elementary schools through colleges which indicate the supply of library books per student is inadequate to the need.

In fact, roughly one quarter of the country's public school children attend schools which do not have centralized libraries. Some 41.1 percent of the public school systems surveyed in 1962-63 (those with enrollments in excess of 150) reported they had no library of any kind and nearly 50,000 of them, no professional librarians. The breakdown showed that there was only one professionally trained librarian for every 1,606 pupils.

Some of the public schools surveyed provided only two or three books per pupil and those with libraries had only about 6.2 books per student.

Andover's 1964 school library allocation, most of which went into books, was $10,000. Of this total, $5,000 was split between the high school and the junior high school which breaks down to an expenditure of about $3.12 per high school student and $2.50 per junior high school student, discounting purchases for other library needs.

Amazing cooperation between school staffs and our public librarians has meant steady progress toward adequate school libraries. But so long as our per pupil expenditure for books is only about half the prescribed minimum, this is one school cost we should not consider curtailing.

What Our Readers Say—

To the Editor of the Townsman:
We have heard much about "quality" education in Andover. The challenge facing us is what quality should we choose?

What do we really want for our children? Are we truly concerned with the awakening of the young intellect to a world of knowledge and free choices or are we primarily concerned with a liberal indoctrination of pragmatic ideas?

This is a question that every parent should make his responsibility to find an honest and complete answer to. There are yard sticks for the measurement of answers available to all who will give a few minutes of thought and consideration.

Democracy depends for its very life on the highest possible quality of education. To settle for less is to sell ourselves and, more importantly, our children's futures short! This quality must not be for just those college-bound but for all children from the elementary grades on up.

If you insist upon the education of the total individual to the end that you will develop truly free and profound thinkers, then you must insist upon the highest quality of leadership. Those people in charge of our children's developmental years must be those who live by the highest values, in practice, as in theory. Young people learn more by what they see and hear than by what they are told!

The people of Andover must be courageous enough to do away with superficial showiness, insincere promises, unnecessary restrictions on personnel and students, and, above all, political expediency! When these things predominate, liberal education cannot exist!

For all that we have heard lately, real quality in administrators and teachers can rarely be purchased with money and superficial prestige. Real quality generally transcends these things and requires deeper nourishment. It is a fallacy that the dollar can pay for anyone and everyone!

Lastly, it is the quality and not the quantity of criticism that must be considered. Those professionals who fear constructive criticism and misconstrue it publicly and privately as parental meddling, bear close observation! Every parent has the right to be concerned with every facet of his child's education. Every parent should be brought as closely as possible into his child's circle of learning so that parent-teacher and home-school bonds become strengthened and meaningful.

We know that "Power corrupts and absolute power corrupts absolutely" and that is why we wait to keep our country a Democracy! If we do not give our representatives the information that they require in order to make the wisest decisions then we withhold the most vital ammunition that they have and we might as well not have voted for them at all!

In our country, in the long run, it is all of the people who make the important decisions.

Elsie Eloise Hopkins
6 Chester St., Ballardvale

To the Editor of the Townsman:
Saturday's town meeting was remarkable for many things as those who attended might agree.

Standing in the foreground is the revelation that the current administration, including the finance committee, ought to address itself to acquiring the knowledge that shall give it the skills required to broaden our sources of revenue and pursue paths which lead to reduced costs. (It is no accomplishment to ask for too much money in the first place and then blow your horn as to how you were saving something.)

However, getting good leadership is more of a problem since election because the recently re-elected selectmen, according to their own words, labor under the fantasy that their office is somehow endowed with an over abundance of that quality now.

It is a fact that starting programs off by the use of manipulative tactics supported by questionable budgets insures that the

Story Hours

Today, March 18, school age children will be hearing stories at Memorial Hall Library in keeping with St. Patrick's day. The theme selected by Miss Russell is leprechauns. Even the titles of the stories sound a wee bit Irish which surely is appropriate. "Giants of Connemara and Donegal," "Monday Tuesday," and "The Plaisheim." Mrs. Margaret Berry, children's librarian will be the narrator this afternoon.

Story hour next week, Thursday March 25 centers on the theme of flower fancies. Miss Elizabeth Russell, Supervisor of work with children, will tell "The Brook in the King's Garden," from Raymond Alden's book WHY THE CHIMES RANG AND OTHER STORIES and "The Shipwrecked Prince," from a book of wonder tales from the Far East named THE ELEPHANT'S BATHTUB. As usual story hour begins at 3:30 in the children's room at the main library.

Teddy Bears

The regular program for the Teddy Bears section of youngest listeners will be held in the Children's room at 10 Tuesday morning, March 23. These boys and girls are in the four and five-year old bracket and sometimes are called littlest listeners. When the group became too large for a single program, they acquired their individual identity. So it is that Teddy Bears meet one week and Squirrels meet the next, so that each group of children comes regularly to the library for a story-hour every other week. The next scheduled meeting for the Squirrels group will be on March 30 in the Children's room at 10 a.m.

Summer News

Starting next week, the library will make displays and materials available to help individuals answer the questions Where? and What? for the coming summer. Through the American Youth Hostel, Inc. of Boston, Memorial Hall Library and Pike School will exhibit typical hosting equipment and other materials needed by young people taking part in the activities sponsored by the hostel association. The display will be in the lobby of the main library from March 22 until the 29th, it will then be on view at Pike School.

The American Youth Hostel is a relatively new organization - it was founded in 1934. Since then it has grown to 18,000 members of 22 local councils. Its purpose is to sponsor low-cost travel primarily on foot or by bicycle along scenic trails and by-ways. Besides hiking they arrange canoe trips and travel abroad. For descriptive literature, come to the library next week.

Great Decisions

Topic for consideration on the Great Decisions series for the week of March 21 is Vietnam. The question to which the panel will address itself is "Is Victory Possible?" Memorial Hall Library makes available a suggested collection of books to be read to give depth to the televised series on Channel 2. On the subject of Vietnam recommendations are: THE TWO VIETNAMS by Bernard Fall; VIETNAM: IS VICTORY POSSIBLE (this is a pamphlet in the Headline series) SOUTH VIETNAM: NATION UNDER STRESS by Robert Scigliano, "Letter from Saigon" by Robert Shaplen in the New Yorker magazine for July 11, 1964 and September 19, 1964. Other titles will be on display starting March 22.

Experience with both theatrical and operatic costume designing, added to his other professional background, equipped him to create what has been described as a new art form, "original, sophisticated and witty."

Combining more than 300 personally created marionettes with his own recordings of both classical and popular music, Llords presents a ballet, a world tour, a Broadway musical, a medieval drama and a trip through time and space.

The Concerttheatre has been presented in 22 countries on four continents and in five languages. Llords has frequently made guest appearances with symphony orchestras in special productions. New Rules Hit
Restaurateurs

New state regulations for food establishments provide that no person shall operate a food service business unless he is the holder of a valid permit granted by the Board of Health.

Permits must be posted on the premises and they are not transferable from persons or places. Local health officials report that applications for the permits are available at the health office in town hall, and that they must be renewed yearly.

Other regulations require that plans for construction or remodeling a restaurant must be submitted to the Board of Health before construction is commenced.

Detailed information on these regulations may be had by contacting Mrs. Elizabeth Nadeau, director of Public Health.

COLUMBIA AUTO SEAT COVERS, 165 South Broadway, Lawrence, is just the firm that can do the job. In fact, they can re-do the entire interior — from roof to carpeting. The old family buggy will take on the appearance of a custom auto for far less than you'd believe possible. Visit the folks at COLUMBIA AUTO SEAT COVERS and let them give you a price on custom re-upholstery on YOUR car. 683-2205 is their number, give them a call and make arrangements to visit them for all the details.

Insurance can take whatever form you decide is the most practical and economical for you.

There is no substitute for experience and this is very true when it comes to insurance business. When you contact the WENDELL BERMAN Agency you are getting experienced counselling. This agency offers all forms of insurance that pertain to life insurance, auto, fire, home-owners and all the new business and professional "package policies".

Dress-Up Time —

Now that spring is just around the corner it is time to get the family car back into its best appearance. You can wax the body and generally make the outside new-looking, but what about the interior? For that, you need the services of an expert. New seat-covers or a new headliner is just too complicated to do yourself. So, we call in the services of experts . . . COLUMBIA AUTO SEAT COVERS, 165 South Broadway, Lawrence, is just the firm that can do the job. In fact, they can re-do the entire interior — from roof to carpeting. The old family buggy will take on the appearance of a custom auto for far less than you'd believe possible. There is no need to trade an auto that is still giving good service but has a somewhat shabby interior. Visit the folks at COLUMBIA AUTO SEAT COVERS and let them give you a price on custom re-upholstery on YOUR car. 683-2205 is their number, give them a call and make arrangements to visit them for all the details.

Camp Fire Girls Begin Birthday Celebration

Camp Fire Girls and Blue Birds in blue and white uniforms will attend Christ Episcopal Church and St. Augustine's Church, Sunday, March 21 in observance of the 55th anniversary of the founding of the national organization.

Protestant girls from Andover and North Andover will worship together at the 9 a.m. service at Christ Church. Catholic girls from Andover will attend the 8 a.m. Mass at St. Augustine's Church, and North Andover girls will attend the 9:15 a.m. Mass in St. Michael's Church school hall. Jewish girls will wear their Camp Fire and Blue Bird costume to Sunday School.

Posters and displays with the theme "Think Big - Widen Your World" are being prepared by Camp Fire Girls and Blue Bird groups for exhibit in town libraries and shop windows in both Andover and North Andover, March 21-28.

Special programs at group meetings will honor Dr. Luther Halsey Gulick, who with his wife founded the organization on March 17, 1910. Well-known in the fields of health and education, (and the father of four daughters), Dr. Gulick felt that character was developed during one's leisure time and that girls needed a program especially developed for them. The official insignia with its crossed logs and flame was chosen to symbolize the hearth fire of home and the camp fire of the outdoors. Indian lore was added for its simplicity and beauty.

Today Camp Fire Girls offers a year-round educational and recreational program for girls seven to seventeen - Blue Birds, Camp Fire Girls, Jr. Hi Camp Fire Girls and Horizon Club - emphasizing the application of religious, spiritual and ethical teachings to daily living, love of home and family, pride in woman's traditional qualities, deep love of country and the capacity for happy group relations.

Town Hall Plans Hang In Balance

After two talks with an architect from Perry, Shaw, Hepburn & Dean, Town Manager Richard Bowen is not sure whether the town can benefit financially from using preliminary plans drawn for a town hall at the time urban renewal was considered.

He was to confer Wednesday, after Townsman press time, with a partner of the Boston firm to see if the company would make an adjustment in fees to cover the earlier work, already paid for. PSH&D also drew the plans in question.

If there is to be no fee savings, Bowen said this week that he will begin to interview architects for the municipal design job.

The problem, said the manager, is not in scaling down the plans for the larger town hall planned in 1962. This can be done, he said. He indicated that he did not wish to restrict himself to consideration of just one architect, however, if no savings would be realized.

WILL PROBATED

In a will dated April 25, 1946, Mrs. Eva C. Bodwell left her unestimated estate to her daughter, Sarah E. Houghton, 31 Morton St.

SBAC TO SEE SCHOOL PLANS

Manager Richard Bowen said Monday that an appointment has been made with the state School Building Assistance Commission for March 30 when it is hoped plans for the new high school will be ready for approval.

AHS Gym Team Does It Again

Andover High's gym team has won the Massachusetts Gymnastics title for the fourth straight year, leading the field with 104.80 points in Saturdays competition at Framingham North High School.

Coach Joe Dorsey's gymnasts were trailed by Braintree High (101.45), the only team to beat the AHS boys in a total of 51 meets.

For Dorsey it is the fourth win in five years of Andover coaching. His first team took a runner-up position.

Competing in the various finals events were: Floor exercises, Warren Hastings and Ben Ardizzone; side horse, Carl Vogt and Norm Auchterlonie; horizontal bar, Ardizzone and Ray Pelletier; tumbling, Hastings and Mason Arnold; long horse, Mike Winters and Dave West; parallel bars, Hastings and Ardizzone; still rings, Pelletier and Ray Dery.

At its meeting Monday, the Board of Selectmen commended Coach Dorsey and his team for their continuing high-caliber performance.

Interfaith Panel Speaking Sunday

Father Francis McGuire, pastor of St. Augustine's Church and The Rev. Donald McAnich, pastor of Central Methodist Church in Lawrence, will take part in a panel discussion led by The Rev. Forrest L. Knapp, general secretary of the Mass. Council of Churches Sunday at 7 p.m. at the Free Christian Church.

The topic is "Are Unity and Vitality Compatible?" The question deals with whether church unity will lead to uniformity or agreement in essentials plus diversity in modes of expression. The discussion will be informal, and after the panel response those attending may take part. All are welcome to attend.
